A large, ornate wooden reception counter with a curved front. Behind the counter is a traditional Chinese medicine cabinet with numerous small drawers. On top of the cabinet are several glass jars containing dried herbs. Two vertical scrolls with calligraphy are displayed on either side of the cabinet. The counter is flanked by two red cylindrical pillars.

A large wooden cabinet with a grid of small drawers, used for storing traditional Chinese medicine. The top shelves hold several glass jars containing various medicinal ingredients. A potted plant is placed next to the cabinet.

A glass display case containing three large metal dispensers. The glass features a logo consisting of a green cross and a leaf, with the text 'NAM Y QUÁN' below it. The dispensers are arranged on a counter inside the case.

A white air conditioning unit mounted on the wall above a dark wooden door. The door has a traditional panel design.
